JOHN DOYLE

January 22, 2009 The Globe & Mail

FLY ME TO THE MOON (CBC, 9 p.m.) is an absorbing, highly enjoyable documentary (made by John Curtin) about our relationship with the moon. A successful blend of science, anthropology and whimsy, it's educational and cleverly named to keep us glued. For a start, it goes back to our ancient ancestors and how "food, sex and children" were influenced by that thing in the sky in a moon-centric culture.
